

1811

Henry Clay was elected to the House of Representatives. He was elected Speaker of the House on the day he took office.

Most of Henry Clay's life was spent trying to save the Union. The South almost left the Union several times.